Keynote Address:

Nurturing Resiliency: Trauma and the Brain- Deborah Gray, MSW, MPH (2.5 CEU)

What is happening in brain development when children are under the stress of neglect and trauma, including prenatal stress and substance exposure? This keynote will describe the changes in the way children process information and meet their world after maltreatment. Scientific advances are helping parents and professionals better understand the brain based changes that occur in children's processing after exposure to trauma and neglect. Ms. Gray will define executive dysfunction and the audience will learn about the effects of chronic trauma in the early years including how we can help children with executive dysfunctions best processes information. This keynote will also examine the latest research on children's brains and the impacts of moves on vulnerability to stress and development of pathological grief, Attention Deficit Disorder, and/or Executive Dysfunction.

9:00-12:00

Keynote Address:

Attaching in Adoption- Deborah Gray, MSW, MPH (3 CEU)

What are attachments and why is "attachment" such an issue in adoption? Ms. Gray will provide the essentials of building secure and mutually gratifying relationships over the growing-up years. She will describe specific challenges to secure attachment after maltreatment and appropriate tools for overcoming obstacles. This keynote address will give participants practical tools to use with children and teens by examining the following questions: What is the role of attachment in stress regulation, empathy, and social relatedness? What are the effects of disorganized attachments (the most common style after neglect and abuse) on children's development? What are some practical methods of helping parents and children move into a secure attachment style and methods of protecting that secure attachment relationship. What are the effects of trauma on children's attachments, and the need to prevent continuing stresses and trauma for children?

Lunch (provided)

1:00-2:30

Session I Breakout Sessions:

A. Reconnecting When Your Open Adoption has Fizzled Out - Patricia Martinez Dorner, MA, LPC, LMFT (1.5 CEU)

At the beginning of most open placements, contact is exciting and central to the experience. For various reasons, however, the relationship everyone agreed to may fade, become unpredictable, or cease. This workshop address both the birth family and the adopting family's complicated emotions about this development, and a panel will share their experiences with rebuilding communication after a breach in open adoption.

B. Healing Hidden Wounds: Grief and Shame in the Adopted Individual- Tammy Linseisen, LCSW (1.5 CEU)

People who are adopted experience different variations of loss as part of their adoption processes. This workshop will offer information about developmental grief responses and highlight the attachment milestones in which these grief responses might emerge more readily. Participants will be asked to reflect on their own experiences while also learning about ways that attachment relationships both enhance and mitigate loss.

C. So You're Thinking about Adoption?- Janie Cravens, LCSW (1.5 CEU)

There are only a few absolute "rights" and "wrongs" when it comes to adopting because all the world's children need parents. Despite this, making the decisions about where to focus one's adoption efforts can be confusing and fear ridden. This workshop will address Pros and Cons for domestic, international, older child, infant, and independent adoption options.

2:30-2:45

Break

2:45-4:15

Session II Breakout Sessions:

A. Healing Hidden Wounds; Grief and Shame in the Relinquishing Parent – Donna Crews Finney, LMSW (1.5 CEU)

The emotional complexity of being a person who has a child being raised in another's family spans one's whole life time. Often the grief from this experience hides underground, wears disguises, and invites coping mechanisms that cause new problems. A panel of relinquishing parents will share their experience and strength in this interactive workshop.

B. Exploring the Gift of Resiliency - Nyla Lengacher, LCSW (1.5 CEU)

A panel of adoptees will discuss the commonalities in their different experiences growing up as adopted children. We will examine what elements they believe contributed to their resiliency as children and ultimately their success as adults. This panel will include adults adopted internationally, as an older child, and in open and closed adoptions.

C. What Do Prenatal Exposures Mean to Your Baby?- Lori Wolfe, MS, CGC (1.5 CEU)

Pregnancies are often exposed to many different substances including alcohol, cigarette and marijuana smoking, prescription medication, and illegal drugs. All of these substances can have different effects on a pregnancy depending on the timing and the dose of the exposure. This presentation will look at the common pregnancy exposures and the possible risks to the unborn baby.

PRESENTERS

Janie Cravens, LCSW has more than 30 years of experience in adoption, infertility, attachment, child welfare, and birth parent concerns. She is a pioneer of open adoption practices in the U.S. and orphanage care in the developing world. She resides in Austin where she owns a consulting company, Adoption Development Resources.

Donna Crews Finney, LMSW is the Outreach and Marketing Specialist for the University of Spiritual Healing and Sufism and maintains a private practice. Her extensive social work and counseling background includes over 25 years helping women recover from addiction to drugs, alcohol, and negative thinking.

Tammy Linseisen, LCSW has been a member of the clinical faculty at the University of Texas at Austin School of Social Work for 13 years. Her educational and clinical interests involve many areas of child and family welfare. Currently, Tammy has developed and teaches a graduate course on Child and Adult Attachment, and the study of attachment is currently one of her strongest passions. She is a member of the adoption triad as an adoptee and believes that this truth sparked much of her passion in this study and practice.

Lori Wolfe, MS, CGC, is the Director of the Texas Teratogen Information Service for the state of Texas and is the current President for OTIS, the national Organization of Teratology Information Specialists. Lori, a board-certified Genetic Counselor specializing in the area of teratogen counseling, began the Texas service in 1991. The teratogen service answers questions on the toll free Pregnancy Risk line from both the public and health care professionals about pregnancy and breast feeding exposures to common agents such as alcohol, cigarette smoking, illicit drugs, prescription medications, and over-the-counter products. Lori's area of special interest is adoption. Lori is happily married to Doug, who is an engineer at Vought Aircraft in Dallas. They have three wonderful children: Shaelynn, Shaun and Shane.

Nyla Lengacher, LCSW has worked in the mental health field for the past 20 years. Her work has included: individual; group and couples counseling; program administration; life coaching and consulting. Nyla currently has a private practice in Austin. In her private practice, she focuses most of her work with issues related to mood disorders, social anxiety and adoption issues. She also provides pre and post reunion counseling for adoptees.

Patricia Martinez Dörner, MA, LPC, LMFT has been an advocate for adoption reform since the 1980s. She is the author of How to Open an Adoption: a guide for parents and birth parents of minors; ADOPTION SEARCH: An ethical guide for professionals; Talking to your Child About Adoption; ADOPTION: hablando con tu hijo (Spanish translation), and co-author of Child of Open Adoption. Patricia has an adoption and foster care focused private practice which includes counseling, search assistance, preparation and support. Patricia has been a passionate advocate for children in foster care, locating and mediating contact with their original families.
